Section 1: Property investment in Europe - The big picture (Blue Room)

After years of continued expansion on Europe's property market, it is time to ask the question: how long will this current growth last? The market sentiment is still positive but concerns over rising interest rates, disruptive technologies, rapidly changing tenant needs and issues like global warming or persisting political uncertainty are making investors rethink their long-term strategies.

In a dynamically changing and increasingly unpredictable world, it is hard to keep up with trends. The goal of CEE Property Forum is to help real estate professionals explore future strategies by bringing together market leaders and industry experts from all over Europe. The first presentation of the conference will provide an overview of the key economic trends affecting the real estate market. This will be followed by two interdisciplinary panels which will discuss the current investment and financing landscape not only in the Central and Eastern European region but the entire continent.

The concept of the ideal office space has changed tremendously in recent years. New ways of working and new technologies are giving landlords a run for their money. The first, very diverse panel will talk about what makes an office attractive in 2018 and what it will take to secure new leases and keep existing tenants happy in the years to come.

The automation and digitalisation of valuation (and the entire investment process) can pose a threat to valuers and agents. The second expert panel will debate whether this is something that real estate professionals already need to deal with.

Core CEE markets tend to overshadow the countries of Southeastern Europe but there is a lot to watch out for in this region. Purchasing power and demand for modern space is growing, so it is no wonder that new developers and investors keep entering the market. Besides a couple of established investment destinations, numerous major cities in these countries offer untapped potential for those willing to take higher risks for higher rewards. In the two panels of this section, one of them dedicated to Romania, the region's largest market, key local players will make their case and show why it is worth investing in SEE.

The regional pioneers of the business and other experts will come together to share their ideas and experience in the first panel of this section.

Tourism is booming in Central and Eastern Europe, new developments are popping up all over the region, while hotel has become a popular asset class among investors. The needs of travellers are changing fast with low-cost flights and the sharing economy completely reshaping the face of tourism. The core markets of the region continued to boom in 2018 with year-end figures expected to be on par with or in some cases exceed the results of 2017. At the same time, the voices of those who think that these markets have already reached the peak of the current cycle seem to be growing louder. That in itself is no reason for concern; still, it may be time for market players to come up with long-term strategies that can work in a period of less buoyant growth. Local investors, developers and advisors will share their expectations for the future of the Czech, Slovak and Hungarian markets.
